The Cicadas are Coming!

GENEVA, IL — The buzz is in the air as the periodical cicadas are set to emerge in Illinois this summer, and the Forest Preserve District invites you to learn more during our upcoming program, “The Cicadas are Coming.”

Join us on Tuesday, June 18, from 4-5 p.m. at Fabyan Forest Preserve West, located at 1925 Batavia Ave., Geneva. This interpretive program will be educational as we hike along the trail in search of these unique insects.

“This year’s emergence is a rare opportunity to witness nature’s wonders up close, and we’re excited to share our insights with the community,” said Environmental Education Manager Barb McKittrick.

This all-ages program is free, but registration is required. To secure your spot, register at www.kaneforest.com/register.
